

Santander AM Euro Corporate Bond

2 / 2023

Fund commentary

After the very strong start of the year, the month of February brought a shift back to the inflation problem, putting pressure in most risk markets. That said there were some diverging patterns, with the S&P500 going down by 2.61% but the StoxxEurope600 going up by 1.74%.

On the rates side, yields went up on both sides of the Atlantic with 10-year Bund reaching 2.65% (+36bps) and 10-year Treasury reached 3.926% (+41bps), with both curves experiencing flattening and inverting even more, currently the 2y-10y is close to 49bps in Germany and 90bps in the US.

The key topics for these movements come on one hand, from the upward revision of inflation data in the US and, on the other, from both payroll and consumption data that surprised on the upside.

These factors point to stronger GDP growth in 1Q23, putting more pressure on inflation and in turn a more hikes from the FED. At the end of February, the market was pricing in 3 more 25bps hikes up to June.

In Europe, we had improved business confidence indicators that are a result of the sharp fall in gas prices, with storage levels at the high end of the range for the season, and the end of Covid restriction in China.

Turning to the ECB, at the end of February the market was pricing in a terminal deposit rate of 3.75% implying another 5/6 hikes during the year.

As for the European IG market, credit spreads have been quite resilient during the month tightening by 4bps, even though they've retraced somewhat on the second half of the month, most likely influenced by primary market issuance with more the €60Bn printed. We think inflows into the asset class have been one of the main drivers for this stability, and despite the strong spread tightening since October of 2022 (69bps), the overall yield levels are attractive.

Starting March, the ECB is reduced in 50% the reinvestment of its maturities (QT), that implies only €2.1Bln of reinvestments (focused in green) vs €4.2Bln of maturing credit bonds.

As for the fund, like its benchmark it posted negative performance during the month, but overperforming the later with better performance in Industrials (Real Estate, Basic Industry and Capital goods) and on the curve in the 1 to 5 years and also 7–10-year duration buckets. The focus of the fund has been centered in the primary market, with 19 new issues where we participated (example: GM, Vodafone, ENEL, Siemens, Kering, Tesco, Astrazeneca), that on average have
